A COMMUNITY CAUSE

FERDINAND M. ISSERMAN

Whatever differences, political, religious and economic, that divide the Toronto community will be laid aside next week and temporarily forgotten while the citizens of all creeds and classes unite in a common cause, the raising of the $500,000 necessary to enable The Sick Children's Hospital to function efficiently. Last year the Hospital treated 5,946 children, whose average stay was sixteen days. Its clinic and dispensary registered 55,112 attendances, a marvellous record of service, which commands the admiration of all. None can deny the value of this work. None can resist the appeal of children, of suffering children. These children call to us. They have been wounded in life. Some are afflicted with dread disease. Some are maimed and helpless. They have a fighting chance to overcome their handicaps, and they must look to the community to assist them in their heroic struggle to regain health and strength. The community, we feel, will respond, and will oversubscribe the sum set by the heads of the hospital.

The officials of the Hospital, headed by the president, Mr. H. H. Williams, and aided by that stalwart Canadian, Sir William Mulock, have been busy in the past few weeks organizing their forces. They have mobilized an army of workers who will canvass the community. That army will fight for the cause of the children of our city. It will go armed not with the weapons of war, but with the vision of a healthier childhood. Its objective will be not to maim and to kill, but to heal and to cure. It is an army which will assault the consciences of Toronto citizenry, and will arouse it to the imperative need of the moment.

But the call of the hospital is not only a spiritual appeal. It is also a practical appeal. It is a good business policy on the part of a community to care for the health of its children. All disease, and the poverty it begets, and the crime that follows in its wake are community problems. The child uncared for to-day may be the pauper or the criminal of to-morrow. It is the community with vision that knows that it is far cheaper to cure the child than to allow it to grow up afflicted with disease, and inevitably to become a burden on society. It would be false economy for a city to stint itself where the health of its future citizens is concerned. Many of the social derelicts, who are a drain on the community, might have been saved for service, health and happiness, if proper care and treatment had been theirs in their childhood. So we see that this cause of the children's hospital which comes to us laden with spiritual values, has practical ones as well. It pays a community to be generous.

But not only will the children be aided by the success of the campaign but the whole city will gain. There is nothing that unites men so much as when they work together in a common cause. There is nothing that makes for finer fellowship than the fellowship of partners fighting together in the ranks, fighting for the lives and welfare of little children. There is nothing that will cure men of their prejudices and bigotries towards their fellow-men, than standing together for the interests of the community. We hear much talk on

BNAI BRITH CONFERENCE

BY HERBERT J. SAMUEL

Delegates from the six Eastern Canadian Lodges of the Independent Order Bnai Brith met in Conference at Hamilton last Sunday. The agenda was unpretentious and was dealt with in a practical manner. The reports were business-like. There was a pleasing absence of prepared oratory and of the tendency toward sonorous resolutions. Much useful work was done. The arrows were shot at moderate lengths. This indicates that the Bnai Brith is becoming a solid organization in Canadian Jewry. It will take some years yet of careful and patient expansion but the Bnai Brith in Canada is destined to assume a responsible and representative command in communal leadership. From a hesitating and doubtful experiment the Canadian lodges have become an important asset in the several Grand Lodge Districts of America with which the various lodges in Canada are affiliated. District 1, at New York, has six Canadian lodges, at Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Hamilton, London and Windsor, with a considerable and growing aggregate membership. District 6, at Chicago, has six lodges, at Winnipeg, Fort William, Edmonton, Calgary, Saskatoon and Regina. (Regina has for the past two years or so lapsed into inactivity but it is expected that there will shortly be a revival.)

The lodges at Vancouver and Victoria belong to District 4 in San Francisco. Winnipeg Lodge, No. 650, is about to complete seventeen years of continued activity. The Western lodges have had their periods of expansion and depression. Inflated membership has been followed by heavy losses resulting in financial difficulties. Ambitious programmes have dissipated much valuable energy, but these lodges have maintained a steady existence through their ups and downs, and still occupy the premier place in communal service and direction.

The development of the Bnai Brith in Canada has had to cope with the vast distances which separate community from community, and with the inevitable localizing of outlook natural to communities ringed in with the geographical barriers of distance and inaccessibility. But it has been found possible to establish co-operation. The Western lodges met in conference on several occasions and were able to set up close relations. That more was not accomplished was due simply to the enormous overhead expense involved in the centralizing of effort, which fell too heavily on the small membership. The Eastern lodges have found fewer difficulties, and these are becoming less burdensome as the lodges increase in number and size.

The Bnai Brith has accomplished much and is on the way to accomplish far more yet in the promotion of a common outlook and a co-operative activity in Canadian Jewry. In the larger cities the lodges have brought elements together which would otherwise not mix, and men have learned to call one another "Brother"—and what

MUST "CHAMBER MUSIC" BE CHAMBER MUSIC?

CHAMBER MUSIC WILL NO LONGER BE JUST CHAMBER MUSIC IF THE LONDON STRING QUARTET, WHICH WILL APPEAR HERE ON MARCH 17th AT THE VICTORIA HALL, WESTMOUNT, HAVE THEIR WAY. THIS YEAR THEY ARE PLANNING TO BREAK ONE MORE CONVENTION IN THE MUSICAL WORLD; THEY ARE PLANNING TO GIVE ONE AND ONLY ONE CONCERT IN NEW YORK AND GIVE THIS ONE IN CARNEGIE HALL. IT WILL BE THE FIRST TIME THAT A CHAMBER MUSIC ORGANIZATION HAS GIVEN A CONCERT IN CARNEGIE HALL BY ITSELF ENCLOSED OF SO-CALLED "CHAMBER MUSIC." IT WILL REVOLUTIONIZE POPULAR CONCEPTIONS OF WHAT CHAMBER MUSIC IS.

"CHAMBER MUSIC SHOULD NO LONGER BE CALLED CHAMBER MUSIC," DECLARED MR. C. WARWICK-EVANS 'CELLIST, SPEAKING FOR THE QUARTET. "BECAUSE IT IS SO MUCH MORE THAN THAT. THE WHOLE MODERN MOVEMENT IN MUSIC IS A CHAMBER MUSIC MOVEMENT. PEOPLE HAVE THE IDEA THAT MUSIC FOR FOUR-STRINGED INSTRUMENTS MUST BE PLAYED IN A SMALL HALL. THERE IS NO REASON FOR THAT. IN BARCELONA, SPAIN, AND IN SOUTH AMERICAN TOWNS WE FREQUENTLY PLAYED TO AUDIENCES OF 5,000 IN HALLS AS LARGE OR LARGER THAN CARNEGIE. THE COMPOSITIONS ON OUR PROGRAMMES CAN JUST AS WELL BE PLAYED IN A LARGE HALL IF THE ACOUSTICS ARE GOOD.

Shaar Zion Congregation, Claremont Avenue, below Sherbrooke Street. Rabbi Julius Berger

The dedication ceremony of Shaare Zion Synagogue Claremont Avenue, below Sherbrooke Street, took place February 28. To the chanting of the cantor and choir, the elders of the congregation, wearing their talesim and carrying the sacred scrolls of the Law covered with mantles of red, purple and blue velvet or silks, embroidered with gold, silver and semi-precious jewels, made their way down the aisles of the synagogue until they were met in front of the Ark by the younger men of the congregation who accepted the scrolls from them. As they stood ranged before the congregation, the children of the religious school decorated the scrolls with wreaths of flowers.

The ceremony of lighting the perpetual lamp followed. Rabbi Julius Berger pronounced the words, "Let there be light."

The scroll-bearers made a circuit of the synagogue, while the cantor, choir and congregation chanted a psalm of David in the sonorous old Hebrew. The president, David Cummings, assisted by the parnass, Zelig Ratner, placed the scrolls in the ark.

Rabbi Herman Abramowitz of the Shaar Hashomayim Synagogue, gave an address of greeting. Rabbi Abramowitz advised the new congregation not to fall into the error of making their synagogue merely a social centre instead of a religious one.

Among the congregation were Lewis Cohn, Myer Feldman, S. Leopold, Myer Block, Captain Sebag Montefiore, Joseph Dobrofsky, Israel Bald, Dr. Norman Vineberg, Z. Rattner, A. B. Finestone, S. Schmerling, Myer Dobrofsky, H. S. Greenwood, Joseph Shapiro.

The average English-Jewish newspaper has many charges placed against it by its numerous willing critics. The paper, usually a weekly, is called a faulty mirror of Jewish life, it is nothing but a schmoos gazette, its stories are poor or too few, it hasn't enough serious articles, it carries too many names and too much news of trivial doings, its editorials are just so much blather, it will print anything in the world of specific Jewish interest which the editor can clip from some contemporary without reading; it will take contributed pearls of wisdom and condense them into paste jewels to fit a certain number of inches, it is too eager to save space, the same thing as money, and not idealistic enough to try to edify the subscriber a dose per week—et cetera, on and on and on. It is true that the average English-Jewish weekly is far from perfect, but the most serious defect it possesses is never mentioned by its critics and it is a question whether the most active ones among them would want this defect remedied.

The trouble with the average Jewish weekly is that it suggests only one side of the picture of Jewish life. It tells of honours that come to Jews, it brags about what Jews do, it grows livid over injustices to Jews, but that is only the half of it. It does not report crime or happenings in human society where Jews behave in a way to throw discredit on their people and all people. If the Jewish weekly has the space it reports in detail any unfair treatment accorded Jews anywhere in the world and crimes against them, but there is no Jewish paper on this continent which makes space for the crimes which Jews commit against Gentiles and against each other. Jews commit crimes because human beings commit crimes and Jews are human beings, but to read the Jewish newspaper you would think that the Jewish community is the one place where no one does any wrong. At the time of the Leo Frank case every Jewish paper told all about the ill-treatment he received, but none made anything of the Leopold-Loeb case except to comment editorially on the possible outcome and then on the final decision in connection with the general study of crime, for example.

Such is the custom among the Jewish papers in this country and time-honoured. The reason for it is not any exceptional delicacy or fastidiousness on the part of the paper. It is a matter of policy dictated by the respect the paper has for the advertiser's opinion of the Jews. The advertiser reads accounts in the daily papers of crimes by Jews and the paper feels that this is more than plenty, that the least said about any Jewish misdoing the better for its own business. The paper knows that Jews must be several times as good as the Gentiles to be thought half as good by them and it is anxious to have the Gentiles think well of the Jews, partly in its own interests.

If the English-Jewish paper did report Jewish crime it would have the example of the average daily newspaper which reports all crimes as news. Whether the daily newspaper should do that is always being debated and questioned by some. Assume that by reporting crime the daily newspaper does some good besides recording the entire life of the times for future generations. The light of publicity turned upon crime brings about criminal reform, prison reform, the revision of laws, the enactment of laws to check the evil and also corrective measures toward diminishing crime. The knowledge and fear that publicity will be given a crime if carried out is undoubtedly a powerful deterrent to crime, at least commecrial crime, among a certain class of people.

The "London Jewish Chronicle" and the "London Jewish World" tell their readers of the part taken by the Jews in the Law Courts after the news has been printed already in the general press, but even then they are implored to suppress reports of cases in which Jews have figured discreditably. The English-Jewish paper is the bulletin board of the community and read by all. For a man to be known generally as a bootlegger or as a bankrupt who has taken his creditors' money and settled it upon his wife is one thing. To have all that announced in print in the same paper which tells of his wife's dinner party or his son's bar-mitzvah is something else again. It makes his bad bad behaviour a matter of authoritative community knowledge and puts the stamp of disgrace upon it. It splashes more mud on his innocent family and few men want their children spattered with mire that they have been through.

Dr. David de Sola Pool, rabbi of the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue of New York, believes it the duty of the Jewish press "to report not every police court case, but cases big enough, striking enough or unusual enough in which the Jew figures in an unfavourable light—not to adopt sensational methods of the gutter press or to feed your readers on stories of crime, but I do mean that it is not fair to report crimes against Jews and never report crimes by Jews.

To publish accounts of Jewish crime committed by gangsters and hardened criminals as are found in New York and other big congested centres would not lessen crime among these people but it would help the daily press to turn the attention of thoughtful citizens to a study of the causes underlying the condition and perhaps result in the subsequent adoption of corrective measures. To publish the facts of crime among other classes of offending Jews would lessen it. To record pleasantly only pleasant things is to preserve a picture incomplete to say the least. Should this weakness, then, be remedied? Critics (which means the circulation list from A to Z . . what's your pleasure?

Social Life about 25 Years Ago— Do You Remember?—

In Montreal a daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Redlich. Paulina, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. . Sharkofski, was married to Moses A. Silverman, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Silverman; Cantor M. Goldstein assisted Rabbi B. M. Kaplan. At a meeting of the Chevra Kadisha at 18 St. Lawrence Street, Roman Joseph, president, announced that through the efforts of S. W. Jacobs, honorary solicitor of the Society, the Legislature of Quebec passed a bill incorporating the Society. Likenesses of A. Wolofsky and D. Lazarus were presented to them by the Society. Officers: president, Roman Joseph; vice-president, H. Solofsky; first gabbe, A. Wolofsky; second gabbe, A. Tolzes; gabbe mishnayis, H. Liverman: secretary, A. Albin; treasurer, Max Usher; trustees, Chaskelson, Isaacson and Feinberg. The corner stone of the new Baron de Hirsch Institute Building was laid by D. A. Ansell, president. His Worship Mayor Prefontaine, M.P., spoke. Officers of the Society were: A. Goldstein, vice-president; Israel Rubenstein, treasurer; E. L. Rosenthal, honorary secretary; trustees, L. Holstein, M. Coviensky, Z. Fineberg, S. Fischel, Lyon Cohen and M. Markus; W. H. Baker, clerk. School committee included Horace Joseph and A. M. Vineberg. Honorary officers: Maxwell Goldstein, counsel; L. Al Hart, notary; S. W. Jacobs, solicitor; A. Kirschberg, mohel. Honorary members included Feodor Boas, Harris Vineberg, D. S Friedman and J. Scherman. The society had been founded in 1863 under the name of the Young Men's Hebrew Benevolent Society. Its first officers were L. L. Levey, I. B. Davis, G. G. Levey, H. Moss, G. Littauer, I. Ascher, S. Silverman, S. Ollendorf, J. Samuels, B. Kortosk. At the annual meeting in 1867 the balance in the treasury was twenty-nine cents, and in 1869 the Society was in debt to the treasurer for $52. In 1890 Baron de Hirsch sent a donation of $20,000.00 and the Society established the Baron de Hirsch Institute at 7 St. Elizabeth Street as a free school for poor Jewish children and a sheltering home for distresesd immigrants and orphans. The late Baroness de Hirsch gave donations for new buildings and at her death bequeathed 100,000 francs. The death occurred in South Africa from enteric fever of Joseph Franklin, whose family lived on 409 Lagauchetière Street.

is yet more worthy, they have learned to understand one another and to sympathize with one another. The Bnai Brith has been of incalculable value in eliminating communal acrimonies. Little ducts of goodwill, perhaps at first timid and halting, have spread out from many of the isolating institutions and, finding their way into the Bnai Brith, have met one another, and setting up a mutually alternating pulse of sympathetic appreciation have produced a better understanding. Zionism, the Talmud Torah, the Temple, the Orthodox, may each look to the Bnai Brith for that support which comes from the practical application of brotherly love and harmony.

In the smaller cities the Bnai Brith has become the dominant factor in the community. The lodges deal with every phase of communal problem and need. They have built Talmud Torahs and maintain them. They have built synagogues. They have taken care of local charity. They have made provision for the young. They are a factor in social life. They Canadianize the immigrant and protect the Jewish name from defamation by Jews as well as by Gentile. Apart from its specific platform the Bnai Brith is creating and developing a splendid type of leader—the leader recognised and encouraged by his brethren; the leader who is not self-appointed, but who is responsible to the body that has selected him, who is truly representative, and who speaks and acts with the authority of demonstrated responsibility. Demanding, as it does, a standard from each member, recognizing no distinction except those of conduct and communal service, the Bnai Brith gives to its leaders the sense that they are the servants of a body of men who need make no apologies, and who scorn to enter into ignoble terms, for doubtful concessions. The Bnai Brith, too, is fostering the right type of Canadian citizenship. The lodges in Canada, while proud of their membership in an international body, are with patriotic insight keeping themselves free from that spiritual bondage to the American way of thinking, which is a little too much of a feature in the Canadian sections of many international bodies. The Bnai Brith is not a collection of little colonies of America in Canada. It is bringing a Canadian mind to bear on the questions of Canadian life. It is stimulating a robust Canadian sentiment, and in interpreting the traditions of Judaism and the ideals of humanity to the Jews who live in Canada, is making a distinctive contribution to the creation of a true Canadian citizenship and nationality. The conference at Hamilton is only a sign post on the way, but it is pointing forward.

Dr. Nachman Shapiro has been appointed assistant professor of Semitics at the University of Lithuania. Dr. Shapiro is the second Jew to hold a professorship at that university.

AN ITALIAN ENDOWMENT FOR THE JEWISH NATIONAL LIBRARY

On the initiative of Prof. Silvio Magrini in Ferrara the foundation has been laid for the establishment of an endowment, the purpose of which is to collect systematically all works pertaining to the history of Italian Jewry and these to be incorporated into the Judaica department of the Jerusalem University Library. The collection will contain:

1. Books about the history of Jews in Italy.
2. Books of Italian authors on the general question of Jewish study and research.
3. Also books on un-Jewish topics written by Jews.

The work is planned systematically; and Italy was subdivided into districts, and over each one a trustee is placed. This trustee will also gather reports about documents pertaining to the history of Judaism in the district under his care.

The drive will not only benefit the Jerusalem Library, but will aid in the study and research of the history of Italian Jewry. The endowment is under the general direction of Professor Dante Lattes as representant of the Jerusalem Library, Professor Umberto Cassuto, Florence, and Professor Silvio Hagrini, Ferrara.

IMMIGRATION QUOTA FOR MEXICO

Within the last two years a large number of Jewish immigrants arrived in Mexico and were received with favour by the government authorities as well as by the general population. It was, however, soon discovered that the opportunities for making a living there were very limited and in spite of the reported concessions made by the government, the Jewish immigrants were hard pressed. It is now reported that the government is planning to introduce a quota system for immigrants, similar to that existing in United States and providing that only such gersons would be permitted to enter the land as are not likely to create competition in the labour market. The Bnai Brith organization, which maintained an office there with a view of assisting immigrants, reports that recently fifty Jewish families returned to Russia and that many others are prepared to return, despairing of finding the means of a livelihood in the new land.

To the Men and Women Who Care

No decade in history has shown such a stupendous advance in the powers of men as the ten years just past.

Man has conquered gravitation with the aeroplane, annulled distances with the wireless, plumbed the depths of the seas with submarine. PEMBER has just as completely conquered all the diseases of the scalp and hair by removing the cause from the human system, and also treating the scalp externally and preventing the hair falling and turning grey. Nineteen years ago Pember discovered an acid in the human system that destroys the coloring and nourishing matter of the hair.

By his system of treatment this acid can be removed and the hair will be glossy and rich, and in many cases returns to its natural color. His system of treatment prevents baldness and thoroughly eliminates conditions which impoverish the scalp and hair, and in some cases has grown hair on heads which have been absolutely bald for ten years. all sides of goodwill between peoples, goodwill between sects and creeds, between Catholics and Protestants, between Jews and Christians, between fundamentalists and modernists. That goodwill so desirable and so essential can be achieved best not by proclamations of leaders, nor by compacts between organizations, but by submerging sectarian differences and cooperating for the welfare of the community. The need of the children's hospital is a community cause. It challenges all groups and classes, and as they answer that challenge they forget the differences that separate, and recognize the common humanity which links soul to soul, and man to God. This campaign as it helps our children will also help unite a community.

Editor,
CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW.

Nothing is more repugnant to me than to have to engage in personalities with Mr. Rhinewine, whose gracious manner of retort to my letter published in the REVIEW of January 29 has such a very delightful flavour. However, since the issue involved touches upon a matter of wider interest, I must again ask for space, in order to state the case a little more fully and also to divulge a few things.

I have in my letter to the REVIEW, pointed out a few facts of deftly concealed plagiarism. In reply Mr. Rhinewine makes a poor retreat by the mere argument of crafty insinuations. In a mood of serene innocence, slightly offended, he poses to ask, why these "attacks" against him, and ventures a few arguments in justification of his unprincipled attitude to what an author may lay claim as his own, thus displaying a perverted and rather monstrous sense for literary propriety. Did Mr. Rhinewine ever hear of the name of Schomberg, or of the work by A. M. Hyamson, before he saw that mentioned in a footnote to my history?

In a plaintive vein he tells of my criticising attitude against him ever since he began publishing his history. But the truth is that I never deemed it necessary to pay his work as much attention as to mention it more than once, and, at that, I was criticising his methods rather than his work, which I considered, and still consider, as not amounting to very much. It is not my intention to repeat here what I already said on that occasion about the "discretionary" methods of this self-styled historian of Canadian Jewry. As a striking instance in point, it should suffice now to say—which I divulge for the first time, and do so most reluctantly—that Mr. Rhinewine made use, for his very original work, of a manuscript which belonged to the "Jewish Daily Eagle," containing an outline for a history of the Jews in Canada. This manuscript, previously in possession of the writer of these lines, was, it is true, loaned him for his perusal; but he made use of it to such an extent that he not only copied a considerable portion out of it, but also the same division of historical periods, which he later used for his own history.

Now, this is one of my "secrets" which I was practically challenged by Mr. Rhinewine to divulge; his request is complied with. I could say much more, but that is hardly necessary. Mr. Rhinewine now deplores the absence of "criticism in the usual way," as he terms it. But what should one say of a pretended work on history, according to its size—merely a pamphlet, and which is far from being original or authentic, or at that even comprehensive? What should one say of a work which bears the imprint of so little study as his, and which bespeaks so eloquently the deficient knowledge of its author? And what should one say of the author himself, who was not only ignorant of all the sources available, but does not even know that the phrase, "six French men-of-war," means in good King's English, six French warships. (On page 22 of his book he gives it in Yiddish as "krieger" or warriors . . .). He speaks of "glory," but he surely may have his portion of it all for himself!

The amusing part of it all is that Mr. Rhinewine, whose investigations, as one may judge from his little volume, never extended very far beyond the pamphlet issued by the Spanish and Portuguese congregation of Montreal, extends such a cordial welcome to "all sincere students" to use his material, if they are willing to continue the research work which he began (sic!). It would be a pity, indeed, to turn down such a generous invitation, were it not, however, for the fact that sincere students, as a rule, know their own way to original and more authoritative sources.

Respectfully yours,

B. G. SACK.

I would like to know why it is that the Jewish societies and clubs do not patronize Jewish musicians?

Being a member of the Musicians' Fraternity, I know enough Jewish musicians, of high standard, to play at all banquets and dances run by the societies and clubs.

I know that every time any Jewish drive is put on, the Jewish musicians are the first ones to help and yet, when any Jewish fellow tries to get a dance it is always given to outsiders!

I am not casting any slur on anybody, as everyone is entitled to get a living, but, I think, if the Jewish community would work in harmony with the Jewish musician the first step towards the realization of the aim of these societies would be realized.

Hoping that you will publish this in your next issue, I remain,

Respectdully yours,
A JEWISH MUSICIAN.

Opening of Cornwall, Ont., Synagogue

Sunday, January 10th, the Jewish Congregation of Cornwall took possession of their new synagogue, Beth-El, on Third Street. It is veneered with red brick. The inside is finished and has two rooms, one where the children take their Hebrew lessons. There is a basement, partly finished, and when the present debt is cleared the congregation will add to what has already been built.

The ceremony started with the opening of the doors by Mrs. Moses Miller, to whom a golden key was presented after the lights were turned on, and the congregation entered. A service was conducted by Rev. Bloomfield, of Montreal, assisted by Rev. Oppen, of Cornwall. At the close of the service the congregation was served dinner provided by A. Horovitz, president. Mr. Horovitz spoke and money was donated. The Secretary, Julius Miller, gave a financial statement. The building was started with only two hundred dollars in the treasury and worth seven thousand dollars. All is paid for but two thousand dollars and a mortgage has been taken out for this amount. This shows the co-operation from local members and from Christian friends. Mr. Miller will give a medal to the boy making the greatest progress in Hebrew; Mrs. Miller one to the girls. Mr. Horvitz will donate a medal to the boys and Mrs. Dover to the girls. Short addresses were given by the vice-presidents, N. Phillips, A. Dover and N. Miller. Mrs. Dover, president of the Hebrew Ladies' Aid, spoke.

Articles donated by Mr. Horvitz, Julius Miller and Mr. Lighter and drawn for under the supervision of Jacob Miller, were won by Mr. Steinberg, Mrs. Litwack and Mrs. H. Segal. The young ladies assisting were: Misses Lillian Rosenfield, Mary Miller, Sarah and Clare Packer. Reference was made to the late Rev. Rosenfield.

The out-of-town guests were: Mrs. A. Rosenthal, Toronto; Mrs. S. Golt and Miss Hilda Golt, Mrs. C. Michaels, Harold Michaels, Miss Lorraine Michaels, Mrs. Goldstein and daughter, Mrs. Bernstein, Mrs. Labelle, Mr. Mersen of Montreal; Mr. and Mrs. A. Rosen and Mr. and Mrs. J. Rosen, of Valleyfield.

SHEAS

A vaudeville bill with headline honours shared by Harry Delf, the popular Broadway comedian and dancer, and "Rosita" will please Shea's-goers next week. During the season just ended, Mr. Delf was the principal fun-maker and dancer with Frances White in "Jimmie." Some of his other musical comedy successes have included George M. Cohan's Revue and "The Rainbow Girl." Harry Timberg's newest production, "Rosita," is as rich in colour as a Spanish shawl and cast in a distinctive manner. Nona Viola heads the company, ably assisted by Pilarica and Paco Moreno, all three hailing from the land "Rosita" represents. Con Colleano is undoubtedly Europe's premiere wireist. He begins where many experts end. Harry Holman and Company, presenting Mr. Holman's latest comedy success, "Hard-Boiled Hampton," is conceded by managers, press and public every place they have played as being the comedy sketch bit of the season. The Texas Four is a male quartette that hails from the Lone Star State. Each is a soloist and each is a humourist and together they are one of the best-liked groups of singers on tour. The rest of the programme includes Cannon & Lee in a cycle whirl, "Canada in Pictures," and an Aesop Fable.

LOEW'S

When George M. Cohan wrote and produced that great sentimental comedy, "The Song and Dance Man," his object was merely to present and portray sympathetically a distinctive theatrical type—the typical, small-time vaudeville trouper. However, Paul Schofield, who adapted this stage success to the screen, and Herbert Brenon, who directed it, have broadened the scope of the story considerably.

The film version, coming to Loew's next week not only mirrors the trials and tribulations of the song and dance man, but faithfully reproduces the whole colourful life of the theatre, even to the actual back-stage operations during a performance.

A more competent and experienced personnel could hardly have been gathered together than that which Mr. Brenon has selected. Tom Moore is happily cast in the title role, which Mr. Cohan portrayed in the stage version. Bessie Love is the ideal choice for the ambitious little actress who achieves musical comedy stardom on Broadway, and Harrison Ford does the best work of his career in the part of the wealthy artist. Norman Trevor, "Bobby" Watson, William B. Mack and Josephine Drake are some of the popular stage favourites who round out the strong line-up.

NEW YORK JEWS URGE LIFTING OF BAN ON ALIEN FAMILIES

New York.—A delegation of well-known Jews of New York, headed by Rabbi Stephen Wise, appeared before the House Committee on Immigration in Washington, D.C., last Thursday to urge favourable action on the Wadsworth-Perlman bill proposing amendments to the Immigration law that would admit wives, husbands and other near relatives of American citizens as non-quota immigrants.

Rabbi Wise was accompanied by representatives of the American Jewish Congress, of which he is President, including Carl Sherman, former Attorney General of New York, Adolph Stern, Grand Master of the Independent Order Brith Abraham, and Bernard G. Richards, Executive Secretary.

They told the committee that the purpose of the Wadsworth-Perlman bill was to prevent the separation of families, and that the admission of near relatives of foreigners who had already qualified as American citizens would be justified on humanitarian grounds.

The delegates said there were many refugees in Europe, among them men and women who were prevented from coming to the United States by virtue of the quota method adopted in the new immigration law, and that hundreds of them were husbands, wives or other near relatives of people now living in this country.

Rabbi Wise read a letter endorsing the bill from Alfred W. Anthony of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ, which has headquarters in New York. Rabbi Wise referred to the Omaha speech of President Coolidge on "Tolerance," and asserted that a change in the law that would remove kinsmen of citizens from the quota class of immigrants would in his opinion, be in keeping with that utterance.

Mr. Sherman said the delegation was not seeking to effect a substantial change in the quota system, but was merely asking for an amelioration of the law for the benefit of the relatives of American citizens. He also stressed recommendations made by President Coolidge in his December message to Congress. Mr. Sherman expressed the opinion that the immigration officials of the Department of Labour favoured the legislation. The letter of the Churches of Christ in America endorsing the Perlman bill follows:

Federal Council of the Church of Christ in America,
105 East Twenty-second Street,
New York, February 3, 1926.

Honourable Albert Johnson,
Chairman of the House Committee on Immigration and Naturalization,
Washington, D.C.

Dear Sir:

Being unable to attend in person the hearing before your committee on the bill proposed by Congressman Perlman relative to the admission of husbands, wives and children of citizens and declarants as non-quota immigrants, I wish to present my plea herewith for favourable action by your committee upon this bill.

I base my conviction that the bill should pass chiefly upon humanitarian motives. The family is the first social unit. All good citizenship and all good government rest upon the integrity of the home. If a husband or wife have been admitted to our country and have taken the steps to become citizens thereof it seems to be proper and right that the bona-fide members of the family should be included. If the gate against entrance is to be closed in the face of any members of a family, it should be closed when the first head of the family asks for admission. If a head of the family has been admitted, then it seems clear that the rest of the members should be admitted and the family life be kept intact.

It is an injustice to two countries to have two fragments of a domestic unit broken and one fragment, detached and alone, kept in either country.

The United States need have no fear of an increase of citizens who come as family units.

Very truly yours,
ALFRED W. ANTHONY.
Chairman.

Morris Yakubovitsch, a Jewish boy from the East Side, was a member of the now world-famous crew of the "President Roosevelt" which rescued the sailors of the sinking freighter "Antinoe" Yakubovitsch was in the first boat which the "Roosevelt" sent out. The first boat capsized and the eight sailors were thrown overboard. Two were drowned. Yakubovitsch, together with the other five, was saved by life preservers. When he was restored to consciousness a day later, he went in one of the boats to assist in the rescue. All the members of the crew and passengers praised his courage. Yakubovitsch attended Public School 109 in Brooklyn and later Commercial High School. He was a clerk before he became a sailor.

During the month of January, 2,139 Jewish immigrants entered Palestine, according to an official report of the Government of Palestine.

A Letter from the President of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies to "The Hospital for Sick Children" $500,000—March 6th to 12th

Toronto, March 3rd, 1926,
505 Excelsior Life Bldg.

Dear Mr. Williams:

The effort of the Sick Children's Hospital to raise $500,000 with which to erect an Auxiliary Hospital at Thistledown is a very noble cause, and worthy of support from every citizen of Toronto.

The Sick Children's Hospital stands as a bulwark of strength to all needy parents, making people feel safer in the knowledge that it is a place where the very best care is available, whether for emergency illness or a long stubborn fight against disability or death.

This Hospital's ministrations are not restricted by race, creed or color.

The new project which it is to undertake is in the interest of humanity, relieving the suffering of children, and should have the unhesitating and generous response of all people.

Giving to the Sick Children's Hospital is one of the ways of rendering service to a very large number of destitute people. It is among the destitute that disease flourishes so easily. What would many a squalid home do for a sick baby without the Sick Children's Hospital?

With the erection of the Auxiliary Rural Hospital this great institution will have more room for its in-patients. It is the one health agency in Toronto which should have the help of every citizen unstintingly, and I feel certain that a concerted effort on behalf of all will make the campaign a success.

Sincerely,

Harry Rokeberg

H. H. Williams, Esq., Chairman,
Board of Trustees, Hospital for Sick Children,
67 College St., Toronto.
